

I am working with a journalist here to try to get this in the story printed but he is not able to publish it immediately.

I would be grateful if you didn't publish this at the moment but any comments gratefully received. If you are able to ask any question about this please do.

I am still confused about the role of Fogbank. I am moving towards thinking it may have something to do with the fusion fuel itself.

Around 1999 there was a plan to build a pilot purification facility inside a building which is or was the Deuterium Production Plant. This didn't do ahead. The facility was build just outside the secure area of Y12, with its own fence. At one time this new building was only to be a prototype facility but it has become the production facility.

John

---

From

Sent: 13 February 2008 15:06

To: John Ainslie

Subject: Re: Email enquiry for ArmsControlWonk

You posted a comment stating that "as part of the W76 LEP a new processing plant for a non-nuclear special material was built at Y-12."

Is this the so-called Purification Facility? What do you have on the connection between the W76 and the Purification Facility? Because I am digging around on this subject.

J

