

Three charged after submarine protest

Boarding the Revenge: Greenpeace activists make their protest on board the submarine at Faslane on the Clyde yesterday.

By IAIN GRAY

THREE activists from the environmental group Greenpeace were arrested yesterday after an incident at the Faslane nuclear submarine base on the Clyde. Using an inflatable boat, two of the activists boarded the submarine HMS Revenge, where they displayed a banner: Danger: Cracked Subs. Greenpeace claims repair techniques being developed to extend the life of the Polaris submarine fleet could result in dockyard and other workers receiving high dosages of radiation. A spokesman at Faslane confirmed three people had been arrested and charged under the by-laws relating to the Faslane base. The action follows a report from Greenpeace, Bring Polaris Home, which claims the Government is struggling to keep ageing Polaris submarines at sea