'HARD ROCK' CRUMBLES!

Civil defence is supposed to provide protection for the population in the aftermath of nuclear war. It is part of Britain's so-called 'deterrent' strategy designed to convince the enemy that some kind of 'normal' life could be resumed after the bomb has dropped.

War Games

In fact, civil defence consists of a series of ludicrous war-games devised by Whitehall bureaucrats and military brasshats. Because of this many local authorities refused to take part in the latest exercise, code-named 'Hard Rock,' causing the Government to cancel it.

Them and Us

While the privileged few hide away in hardened bomb-proof bunkers, Government advice to the rest of us is to 'stay-put' in home-made shelters. A recent TV documentary has vividly exposed just how little protection such shelters would provide.

The Survivors

Those few unlucky enough to survive a nuclear attack will probably wish they hadn't. No medical treatment will be available. Concerned doctors have therefore raised the question of having to perform 'mercy-killings' on injured survivors. The alternative would be painful and lingering death on a massive scale.

The Dangerous Con

CND supports civil defence against natural disasters such as flood, fire and major accidents. But against the human-made disaster of nuclear war there can be no effective defence. It is a con-trick designed to convince us that a nuclear war can be survived and even 'won'. The only real defence is not to have nuclear weapons at all.
